1st September 2021

Dear Colleague,

Welcome back to the start of our new school year. After the challenges of the past eighteen months, to which you have all risen admirably, we hope that this September we can resume a more regular world of teaching and learning which is not as disrupted as it has been. Your efforts to support our children have been amazing, but the challenges of delivering a full curriculum last year were significant, and I hope that we can now look towards that broader school experience again where children can be enriched through visits, plays, music and sport.

We know that this year will not be without its challenges, but I am confident that with the strong working relationships between the authority and our schools, we will continue to deliver the best for the children and young people of Buckinghamshire. I look forward to meeting and working with you throughout this academic year.

Yours sincerely,

Simon James
